

Tiffany Flammger

You

I saw you today and it felt like that day all over again.
It felt like I was dying and all I saw was you watching
Watching me fall apart but you didn't seem to care.
You just walk around like I never mattered to you
Like I am nothing and you know what maybe I am nothing
If you would only talk to me I would tell you everything
I would tell you everything I feel deep within my soul
A soul that is dying without you near.
I would tell you that you are oxygen and I will silently
Die without you if it means that you are happy
If that is what it takes I will look away when I see you
I will keep my thoughts about how much I miss you
How much I miss our talks and your silly side that most never see
I will keep the thought of wanting to hear your voice or see
Your name come up on my phone.
I won't tell you that to me you are the sun and I just wish
That I could be somewhere in your light with you
I won't tell you that I feel like I have lost a part of myself
I won't tell you that sometimes I wish I was strong enough
To fight for you to show you that no matter what I am here for you
I won't tell you that it hurts me when I see you looking at me,
It makes me wonder if you miss me like I miss you,
But that can't be right, that can't be true, you don't miss me
Cause if you did when you see me hurting you wouldn't just Walk away like I am not here. You would let me hear that Voice that I miss so much, you would let me see that smile
But it is all in my head because you don't want me around.
I feel like you wish that you could never see me again

And if I could grant that wish for you I really would.
Just because I know that it would make you smile,
That's all that I have ever wanted, I have only wanted to Be the reason that you smile. But I won't tell you that.